1. Book your flight a few months in advance to get the cheapest flights. Avoid getting flights that are close to your travel date because the costs may be extremely high. Nevertheless, take note that some airlines offer last-minute deals to fill up the aircraft's seats.
2. Share accommodation in youth hostels with your travel partner if you decide you don't need a private room. Backpackers all over the world choose hostels because they're cheap and enable you to make friends with other budget travelers. An even cheaper option is couch surfing, a hospitality service wherein a resident lets you sleep in his home (specifically a couch) for free or with a very low fee. There are a lot of websites that enable you to get in touch with folks who are willing to let you stay in their homes for a night.
3. For cheap holidays to Spain, try the bus. Traveling by bus is usually cheaper than traveling by train although you can already save a lot when using the latter method. Do not use rental cars or taxis---they are very expensive.
4. If you want to see the places around major cities such as Barcelona and Madrid, use the metro systems, or subways. They are very inexpensive and simple to use. An even better method is just walk to visit places of interest. Walking around enables you to see the areas even closer and does not cost a cent.
5. If you can, bring carry-on luggage only, especially if you are planning a short vacation. Many airlines charge check-in bags, so traveling with hand luggage only can save costs. However, note that for long vacations, this may be impossible. If you need to carry check-in baggage, keep it light.
